Tinley Depot Hold-up Man Faces Sentence

The case of Chauncey Kramer, of Blue Island, Rock Island brakeman on a robbery charge was heard in the Cook County Criminal Court before Judge John Prystalski last Thursday. Kramer admitted that he broke into the Tinley Park depot ticket office on May 1st and stole $576 in cash and some checks from the cash drawer while the local depot agent, Anthony Kososki was at dinner. Kramer gained admittance to the freight house and from there into the ticket office by using a switch lock key. After taking the money he walked to Oak Forest, had a drink at a tavern, took a train to Blue Island. He paid a tavern and finance loan in that city then went to Chicago Heights and gambled with the hope of winning enough to replace what he had stolen, but as with the usual gambler's luck he lost. When arrested he admitted his guilt and resigned his job. Thursday of this week he was to receive his sentence.

Helen Nemeth Pretty June Bride

One of the prettiest weddings ever held in St. John's Evangelical church in Mokena, was Sunday June 23, at two o'clock, when Miss Helen Nemeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Nemeth of Homer Township, became the bride of Mr. Roy Lembke son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lembke of Tinley Park. The church was beautifully decorated in palms, ferns and baskets of flowers.

At the appointed hour, to the strains of the wedding march played on the organ by Mrs. Theo. Haeffele, the bridal party took their places at the chancel.

The bride, lovely in a princess style gown of white net and lace with a long train, finger-tip veil falling from a halo of orange blossoms and carrying an arm bouquet of white roses and baby breath, approached the altar on the arm of her father who gave her in marriage. The bride and groom then took their places beneath an arch of flowers, where the pastor, Rev. Theo. Haeffele performed the marriage ceremony.

Preceding the service, Mrs. Haeffele sang, "At Dawning" and during the ceremony sang, "I Love You Truly" accompanied by Mrs. Harry Mall.

The bride was served by her sister Irene, as maid of honor. She wore a blue marquisette dress with a bluish veil falling from a flowered tiara of the same color and carried an arm bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and baby breath.

The three bride's maids were: Miss Lucille Blazek of Chicago, Miss Gladys Ditter of Elgin and Miss Nora Lembke. They were gowned in blue net with matching bluish veil and flowered tiara and carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses and baby breath.

Henry Andreson of Orland Park was best man. The ushers were, Rudy and Charles Baer of Chicago and Robert Nemeth.

The bride's mother wore a dress of blue lace with a shoulder corsage of carnations and bachelor buttons, as did also the groom's mother who wore a navy sheer gown.

At six o'clock, a wedding dinner was served in St. Mary's hall to 75 relatives and friends. The table was centered with a large wedding cake and bowls of mixed flowers.

At eight o'clock in the evening, a reception was held in the same hall where 125 friends and relatives greeted the bride and groom and wished them well.

During the evening, refreshments were served from a prettily decorated table with a huge wedding cake centering the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Lembke have gone to housekeeping with the groom's parents on their farm west of Tinley Park.

Two showers have been given for the bride previous to her wedding. One by bride's aunt, Mrs. Fred Haeffele of Blue Island and the other by the groom's aunt, Mrs. Walter Lembke of Chicago.

Six Serious Situations Face America If Hitler Is Completely Victorious

By DREW PEARSON and
ROBERT ALLEN

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON.—The authors of this column have received many inquiries as to whether, in their opinion, the United States will be dragged into the war. Obviously, this is a question extremely difficult to answer.

However, we have endeavored to set forth below the circumstances which are almost certain to exist after Hitler is completely victorious in Europe as it now seems he will be.

SITUATION NO. 1 is the strong probability that there will be no lenient peace. France and England, if conquered, will be made to feel the conqueror's heel.

One reason for this is that Hitler, himself, knows how easy it is to rearm if the conquered nation is given half a chance.

It may be that his friend the duke of Windsor, as reported since the duke left his liaison post with the British army, will be reinstated on the throne of England, but if so he will be a mere puppet.

It is important to note that the United States has leaned heavily, though indirectly, upon the British fleet for this protection.

SITUATION NO. 2 will be a Nazi search for raw materials. They will get some when they take France and England, but not nearly enough. France probably will cling to her most important areas in Africa, and may even set up a new government there. Britain should be able to keep enough of her fleet to make it difficult to penetrate the Red sea to India. Japan will take Singapore and the Dutch East Indies, thereby cutting off the United States from vital tin and rubber.

Meanwhile, the richest, least populated, weakest continent in the world lies just a short airplane hop across the South Atlantic, protected only by a century-old shibboleth called the Monroe Doctrine.

SITUATION NO. 3 will be local Nazi governments in Latin America. Carlos Davila, former president of Chile and now exiled in the United States, long ago counseled the state department that if Hitler ever was victorious in Europe, South American governments would emulate him. Davila is one of the shrewdest statesmen South America has ever developed, and already the speech of Brazilian President Vargas, inferentially approving Italy's stab-in-back, clearly shows that Davila was right.

Vargas has received several millions from Roosevelt's Export-Import bank, entertained Roosevelt personally during his good-will trip to South America, sells 70 per cent of Brazil's coffee crop to the United States.

Brazil is this country's traditionally closest friend, turned over its fleet to the U. S. A. during the Spanish-American war and during the World war.

But today, 50 per cent of the Brazilian army is Nazi, and if Vargas had not approved Italy's war entry he might have been out of power.

Similar Nazi sentiment exists in Uruguay, Ecuador, Peru and Chile. For example, the state department has just received a confidential telegram that 6,000 Chilean Nazis actually are under arms.

SITUATION NO. 4 which is all-important. Latin American nations can set up local Nazi governments without violating the Monroe Doctrine. Once those governments are established, they can invite German and Italian military advisers or police forces, grant them naval and air bases. And if the United States attempts to stop this, it will have to oppose the local Latin American government as well as Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy, both of which have large groups of immigrants in South America.

If, for instance, the United States should send armed forces to Brazil to prevent a German naval base from being established there, other Latin American nations again might raise the cry of "Yankee imperialism."

The Latins are clannish, and we might easily find the entire continent up in arms against us, siding with the Nazis from whom we are defending them.

SITUATION NO. 5 is a squeeze play on trade.

The most important thing to remember about Europe economically is that Hitler today controls the biggest market in the world. Not only Germany, but Austria, Czechoslovakia, Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium must order goods through his barter system.

In other words, if Brazil wants to

The Blitz Training Camp

—By Thomas.

sell coffee to this area, or Argentina wants to sell meat, or Ecuador wants to sell cocoa, they must barter with Hitler.

Even on a minor scale before the war, we have seen that this leads to friction, trade reprisals, national ill-will. It plants fertile seeds for war.

Imagine the resentment of the southern states if Hitler, as conqueror of England, required all Lancashire's textile mills to buy cotton from Brazil and Peru. It would almost bankrupt the South.

SITUATION NO. 6 is the strong likelihood that all these situations will descend upon us soon. Hitler has shown that he knows time is of the essence. He has been willing to sacrifice a million men—perhaps more—on the Western front because he knows if the war lasts longer than September 1, his raw materials won't last.

Also he knows that the United States is in a preparedness race, and that within another 15 months we will be in a far stronger position to defend the Western hemisphere. Today, on the other hand, he knows we are pitifully weak.

Therefore, it is more than likely that he will move fast. Nazi propaganda and undercover movements in South America already indicate this. Local Nazi uprisings are sure to take place.

And with Nazi-Fascist air lines already operating all over the country, it would be a simple matter for a bomb-laden Nazi plane to slip over the Panama canal. Army officers say it would even be difficult for them to know whether it was a friendly Pan-American plane, and they might not fire at it.

Dictators have shown that they know how to work together, and you can be sure that when and if Japan, Germany and Italy get ready to put the squeeze on the United States, they will have worked out their cooperation to the last T. We will be squeezed from both the Atlantic and the Pacific and perhaps from South America.

In other words, war for the United States depends largely upon whether or not we are going to defend or abandon the Monroe Doctrine.

DETROIT—Where Auto Plants Make Tanks—Where Ford Would Make 1,000 Planes a Day—Where Rooms Are at Premium, and Men Wear Caps, and Roads Are Plentiful, and Where the Canadian Border Makes People War Conscious.

INTO DETROIT where automotive plants have been turning out tanks, mechanized caissons, infantry trucks and a dozen other things for the army at top speed for some time. Back in February when I was last here some of the big factories were working on army trial orders even then. Their proving grounds were cluttered with weird objects bobbing around, rolling over and over, climbing steep banks and even fording rivers.

Four years ago out in Manchukuo I saw Japanese army tanks doing the same thing; and that summer while crossing Russia, I remember how amazed I was near Chita to see tanks "swimming" a river. I reported this to the U. S. army intelligence corps in Washington upon my return and they pooh-poohed the idea!

Yet while covering the Soviet army maneuvers near Otor in Siberia that same year I had seen more than 4,000 men dropped out of airplanes by parachutes. Returning to Detroit in the fall I told Bill Stout about it. Stout is the father of Henry Ford's Stout-Metal-Plane, and is the grandfather of all transport ships in this country today. Stout said it could be done, but he doubted the feasibility of this maneuver. Asked me how much vodka I had been drinking when I saw the feat!

THERE WAS an interesting article in the Saturday Evening Post recently asking if Hitler had been training troops for mechanical warfare in Russia for the past six years. The article was well worth reading. Personally I think he has. Moreover, I think during the recent winter months he has had his able technicians advising with the Soviet, and is being reinforced by the U. S. S. R. at this very moment.

Thus Henry Ford's prognostication, the end of May that his company could turn out 1,000 planes of one-design a day, if needed, is all the more interesting. Some will doubt Ford's ability to do this. During the last war Ford did, however, turn out one sub-chaser a day and one eagle-boat a day—a then almost inconceivable feat. And he has turned out as many as 10,000 of his cars daily, so seemingly nothing is impossible for the man.

Last summer I noted the German infantry was riding in Ford touring cars. Five men to a car—two in the front seat, three in the rear. They had their guns stacked behind the front seat. Every other car towed a field piece, and many of these field pieces, according to my notes, were stamped "made in USA."

Also in case we forget too rapidly Ford had assembly plants in the Soviet, in Holland, in Germany and in Italy I believe.

ACROSS THE RIVER from Detroit lies Windsor, a semi-sleepy Canadian city. Here are many of the assembly plants of American manufacturers with goods to sell in the Dominion. Odd that within a mile everything should be so entirely different. Some say we are not close enough to a foreign border in the United States to realize what it must be to live in some of the European countries today. If you live in Detroit you are conscious of the war, if you take an outing in Canada you are doubly so.

DETROIT IS AGAIN a busy metropolis. The streets are filled with people; shops crowded; hotel lobbies overflowing. It's as difficult to get a room overnight in Detroit as it is in Washington, D. C., today.

Of all of our big industrial cities Detroit and Pittsburgh are the most foreign looking. Half-closing my eyes I can imagine myself in the German Ruhr, in the erstwhile Belgian Ardennes, in the Russian Ukraine, in the Polish Caucasians. The men all wear caps. They tell me there are more caps sold in these two cities than in all of the rest of the United States combined. Most of the women cover their heads with shawls or bandanas.

During the recent recession these cities were the most morbid of the nation. The largest government relief projects were in operation here. But today the scene has changed completely. Boom-times are back with a bang. And it looks as if they are here to stay for awhile.

MICHIGAN CITIES and towns along with probably a great many others throughout the nation are now forming Home Guard outfits in great haste. Gun clubs are drilling once or twice weekly at Skeet, which is a mild form of Parachutist interference. Practically every American in this region goes duck-hunting, deer-hunting once or twice a year. Therefore, there are hundreds of thousands of good shots. It is doubtful if Hitler should invade this continent; but if he does Michigan at least will not be caught un-awares.

UP AT PONTIAC, Mich., where many General Motors products are produced, the rumor is that gas masks are coming off the belts. Some wisecracks will tell you we will be able to supply half the nation with masks before 1941. Yet if Hitler is really using his "Paralysis Gas" as some foreign correspondents claim he is, one wonders if our military masks will do the trick too.

THESE MICHIGAN INDUSTRIAL CITIES are connected by ribbons of cement, in a veritable hub-like fashion. On them there is a constant flow of trucks, cars, pedestrians. Tiny lakes honeycomb the countryside and are the mecca for fishermen. Near them bait is sold by enterprising youngsters. One section up here is undergoing a "bait-war." For miles along each side of the highway, signs read "Crawlers, Hoppers, Worms and Gliders—2 bits a dozen."

TRAILERS, house-cars, land-yachts fill the Michigan camps. For awhile the vogue of the rolling-home went out of existence, but it is back again with a bang.

Many are homemade. Others are more fancy. They sell all the way from $400 to $4,000; and are occupied by some of the most amazing people I have ever had the good fortune to meet.

For nine years now I have been an ardent trailerite myself. I have twice encircled the world in my own land-yacht; and some of the most interesting days I can remember have been consumed in cruising the highways and byways of the world thus. In this country my yearly mileage has been in excess of 75,000.

It is believed in Washington that Roosevelt will allow Knudsen to choose his own defense program methods... Willkie, recently not considered seriously, now looms as a possibility.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—William S. Knudsen will run his show or get out, in the judgment of friends who have watched his career for many years. Furthermore, they think President Roosevelt knew this when he appointed the president of General Motors, and that the appointment, therefore, means that Roosevelt intends to let nothing interfere with the defense—and, incidentally, the "aid the allies"—program.

W. S. Knudsen

with the defense—and, incidentally, the "aid the allies"—program. New Deal lieutenants are apt to prove troublesome—if they are allowed by the President to inject their ideas. The theory of most observers at the moment is that despite the President's determination not to let the emergency interfere with "social gains" made in his administration, he is also determined that nothing must be allowed to interfere with the defense program.

The New Dealers, however, are saying that as the job of organizing industry for armament production has been put into the hands of business, under its own bosses, then industry also must assume the responsibility.

TO HAVE FULL POWER

Roosevelt is emphatic in asserting that his "extra-cabinet" commission will have every necessary power to get production. But if the machinery for carrying the double burden of supplying the present and potential needs of domestic defense and of the allies fails to click, industry must be prepared to see the New Deal take over and order industry what to do, according to its own notions, with all the implications which that carries for deliberate socialization of industry, as a political doctrine.

Even in the hands of Knudsen, Edward R. Stettinius Jr., Sidney Hillman, et al, some regimentation of certain industries is unavoidable if the job is to be done. The difference lies in attitude and ultimate objective. The advisory national defense commission will do as little of it as possible, but the New Dealers will be looking for the opportunity. Incidentally, it is interesting that the present proposed regime for the control of the armament industry came out inch by inch over a period of 10 days, during which the real function and authority of the defense commission was very difficult to ascertain.

WILLKIE IS POSSIBLE

It is little short of flabbergasting how much talk has grown up in just the last few weeks about Wendell L. Willkie, the hard-hitting big electric mogul, for the Republican presidential nomination. One of the last to take it seriously has been Willkie himself, but he certainly is a candidate now. And how!

The funny part of it all is that it is possible for Willkie to win the big prize. Not probable—yet—but distinctly possible. It could happen something like this. The convention would start balloting, after a number of nominating and second speeches, with their timeworn and threadbare—though never in ear-jarring volume—demonstrations intended to show all and sundry that this particular candidate is the one who arouses enthusiasm.

Beyond a doubt the two leaders on that first ballot will be Thomas E. Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft, in that order. Trailing will be Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania, Frank E. Gannett and the lesser candidates. Willkie will have a sprinkling, but only that.

HOW IT MIGHT WORK

Then will come the crucial testing, characteristic of all political conventions which are not an obvious pushover for some favorite. In that testing, Dewey will get the first run, and Taft the second. It is the considered opinion of most politicians that Dewey will not be able to win a majority in this first testing. It is a little doubtful about Taft. He may be nominated within the first few ballots, but he probably will not be.

After Dewey and Taft have had their first runs, and both proved unsuccessful, Senator Vandenberg will be given a short whirl. Best opinion is he will get nowhere, despite the fact that he will have more friends in the convention than any one else.

Up to a few days ago, it was assumed that the next man to be given a chance would be Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio. In fact, Bricker was the man, up to a few days ago, that many of the elder statesmen of the party actually thought was going to be the nominee. Now it would surprise no one if Willkie were then given a "run."

There had been a burglary and a detective had been sent to investigate.

"H'm," he murmured, after he had been round the house and asked a few questions. "Looks to me like an inside job. The burglar evidently knew just where to find everything."

CHAPTER I

"The trouble with me is I'm a snob!"

The blonde girl in the scant white bathing suit chided herself as she lay inert in the hot afternoon Florida sunshine. Then she buried her roughened hands deep into the sand so she could not see the broken fingernails. She tried to pretend she was not Lynn Morrow at all, but somebody glamorous and grand and rich, somebody who was happy and surrounded with friends. She pressed her deeply tanned cheek into the warm sand and closed her eyes to keep back the tears of loneliness.

The laughter of a group nearby on the Palm Beach sand floated and hung on the hot air.

But Lynn continued her black brooding. So this was life. Dishes, scrubbing, pressing, minding Buddy when Mrs. Warren was away. How Lynn hated it. Not but that Mrs. Warren was kind, but what a life for a girl.

Just then a car slowed down up on Ocean Drive. A young man parked it where he had no business to park and got out. He seemed to stroll casually down on the beach.

"Oh, oh! A pick-up, and we're helpless," said one of the young men who had been watching Lynn. But her eyes were closed and she did not see the newcomer.

"I beg your pardon, but aren't you Miss Marion North, from Boston?" he asked, as he stopped above her on the sand.

Lynn sat up hurriedly and brushed the sand from her cheek.

"No, I'm sorry." There was an irresistible twinkle in the young man's eye and Lynn suddenly smiled.

"May I sit down?" he asked as he dropped beside Lynn on the sand.

"You know I'm not Marion North," Lynn accused.

"Of course I do. But it is a good approach."

"I don't think so—"

"Well, I'm talking to you, am I not?"

"It worked. That's what you mean?"

"Exactly." He smiled at her like an impish boy.

Lynn laughed at his audacity in spite of herself.

He was quite right. It had worked and she was glad to talk to somebody—anybody!

Besides, he was such a personable young man with a shock of curly brown hair and a deep tan.

"How about a drink?" he suggested.

"No, thanks." Lynn felt this had gone far enough.

She was lonely, but after all Mrs. Warren would be along to call for her shortly.

The young man seemed to ignore her hesitancy.

"I suppose I should introduce myself. I'm Terry McNair."

He waited expectantly for Lynn to speak, but the name meant nothing to her. She had no time to read the Palm Beach society columns. There was an awkward pause.

"I'm Lynn Morrow," Lynn told him finally.

"Let me drive you home."

"I have a friend calling for me."

The conversation dropped again. But Terry was persistent.

"Come, now, don't freeze me. Here I've driven by every day this week hoping to see you. You were here last Thursday, you know—"

"Yes."

"I'm really a nice guy. I like your looks, thought you'd be nice to talk to." He leaned toward her eagerly, pleased with amazing gold-flecked brown eyes.

"Am I?" Lynn's pert little nose was entrancing, McNair decided.

"Not as nice as I thought."

"I'm really not trying to be rude," Lynn interposed. "It's just that I must leave shortly when my friend comes."

"Then let me sit here and talk to you. Tell me about yourself."

"There's really nothing much to tell. I'm from Vermont—"

"I knew there was something I liked about Vermont."

So went the conversation, about nothing in particular, but Lynn was enjoying herself.

Terry was famous for his small talk and he did himself proud this afternoon. He told Lynn he was waiting for his father to come from New York with the family yacht, that his sister was blonde like Lynn, only not so pretty. And the admiration in his eyes was very comforting to a lonely girl of 18. Time slipped away. She grew nervous.

Mrs. Warren was much later than usual. Never had Lynn stayed so long on the beach on Thursday.

What explanation could she give if Mrs. Warren saw Mr. McNair?

Terry, sensing her nervousness, talked faster. He pretended he noticed nothing, tried to find out where Lynn lived. But she was extremely vague. The sun was getting low, casting a more golden light on the palm trees along the boulevard.

Where could Mrs. Warren be? Mentally, Lynn figured whether the 50 cents in her bag would pay for a taxi.

Surely Mrs. Warren would not leave her stranded here in her bathing suit!

"Wish you'd let me take you to tea; we could walk up to the Breakers. Wouldn't take us long."

"I'm sorry, but I can't today; maybe some other time."

The minutes dragged. Terry did his best about tea, but Lynn was firm. She had already been reckless enough.

"You know I'm not Marion North," Lynn accused.

"I have some candy in the car, I'll get it," he said, and jumped up. While he was gone Lynn had an insane desire to run away down the beach, and she hoped fervently that Mrs. Warren would come while McNair was at his car. But she did not.

Terry came back with the candy and they munched on it. Lynn was hungry. A cool breeze had sprung up and Lynn pulled on the white beach coat which Mrs. Warren had discarded and given to her.

"Now look here. Why don't you let me drive you home? This is nonsense. Maybe your friend is held up. You'll catch cold."

Finally, in desperation Lynn stood up. Her amazing brown eyes were hard now. As she spoke her voice held a deep bitterness which surprised Terry.

"All right. But I might as well tell you now. Then you can do as you want to. I live in a trailer over in West Palm Beach. I'm a maid. I take care of a trailer and look after a child. I'm a 'domestic,' I think you call it."

Terry was speechless. He had expected almost anything but this. But he should have known. Thursdays—maids' day out. The public beach in the afternoon. It seemed very simple now he knew. Lynn started up the beach toward the boulevard.

Terry put his hand on her arm.

"So what?" he laughed, and there was relief in his voice. "You can be a maid for me any time. Come on. Let's get going. You won't be any too warm, the top's down on my car."

Past the bridge he maneuvered his car expertly through the traffic of downtown West Palm Beach.

Lynn began to have misgivings again about Mrs. Warren. But why, then, had she left Lynn to languish on the beach?

Lynn instructed Terry now which streets to take.

It was getting dark when they came to the trailer camp at the far side of town.

"Let me out here," Lynn pleaded.

"Think I'm going to let you get away like that? I want to know where I can find you, young woman!" He drove on briskly, turning into the cinder roadway between the little trailer houses under the palm trees.

"Which way now?"

"To the left," Lynn gave up. Mrs. Warren would have to know. "The last one straight ahead, the maroon one."

Terry drove slowly now. His car came to the end of the trailers and he stopped. Lynn gave an exclamation of dismay. There on the edge of the palm trees where Mrs. Warren's trailer had stood for two months was an empty space.

"She's gone—" Lynn's heart was beating fast. Silly to be so excited. She must have had the trailer moved that afternoon. Probably that was why she was so late.

But Lynn could not understand, for their spot was a choice one in the crowded camp. She and McNair sat there in the car for a moment.

"Where's the office? They'll know where the trailer is," Terry said. He had to back out to the first camp crossroad and Lynn directed him to Mr. Alexander's place. As they got there Lynn jumped out. At least this would keep Mrs. Warren from asking too many questions.

"Thank you so much, Mr. McNair," Lynn turned to Terry.

"I'd better wait and see what happens."

"No, please don't. Then Mrs. Warren won't have to know you brought me home."

"When will I see you again?"

"Next Thursday afternoon." And Lynn ran into the office.

It was hot inside, and old Alexander sat behind his homemade desk reading the evening paper.

"Where has Mrs. Warren's trailer been moved to?" Lynn asked.

Looking over his glasses, the old man started hunting for something in his desk.

"Oh, you're the girl who worked for Mrs. Warren. She's gone." He said the words casually as he continued his search.

"Gone?" Lynn repeated the word as though she did not know what it meant. "Gone where?"

"Here's a letter she left for you." He found the missing document and handed it to Lynn. Slowly she opened it. It was a penciled scrawl, evidently written in a terrific hurry, and Lynn could scarcely make it out.

"Don't go to the police. I am sending your clothes and two weeks' pay to my attorney in New York. I had to do this." A card was inclosed, giving the address of Clarence Mortimer in the Empire State Building. That was all.

"What am I going to do?" Lynn was unaware she spoke aloud. Old Alexander pretended he did not hear. He was so acutely embarrassed Lynn wanted to laugh.

"I'm getting hysterical." She turned blindly and tumbled out into the night. She shivered in her thin beach robe. Once outside she leaned against the flimsy porch post. Her feet would not take her further. What was she going to do? Stranded here in her bathing suit with 50 cents!

She was trembling now in complete panic. And she did not hear Terry calling her name. He got out of the car and came over to her.

"How'd you make out?" He could not see her face; saw only the white blur of her.

"Where'd your boss go?"

"I don't know."

JONAH: THE OUTREACH OF GOD'S LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Jonah 3:1-10; 4:10, 11.
GOLDEN TEXT—Salvation is of the Lord.—Jonah 2:9.

"There's a wideness in God's mercy Like the wideness of the sea; There's a kindness in His justice Which is more than liberty."

"For the love of God is broader Than the measure of man's mind; And the heart of the Eternal Is most wonderfully kind."

Such is the message of the book of Jonah. How appropriate it is to close our series of studies on the prophets with this declaration of God's love and mercy.

I. A Second Chance (3:1-3).

Jonah had been sent to Nineveh with a message from God, but, secretly wishing in his heart that this great city which was the enemy of Israel should be destroyed rather than repent and receive God's blessing (see 4:2), Jonah made an attempt to run away from God's commission. We know how God patiently dealt with him and now gave him a second chance to do His will.

How gracious God is "to continue to us . . . the privilege of service even when we seem to have sinned away our first chance, misused our endowments, and have by our very failure embarrassed His plans." Dr. J. Stuart Holden goes on to point out that only God gives a second chance. Nature does not; man seldom, if ever, gives his fellow who has failed a second opportunity. But God does. Praise His name!

There was also a second chance extended to Nineveh. God was not willing to bring judgment upon the city without another warning. Quoting Dr. Holden again: "I care not what is the history of failure, of shame, of sin which is behind you . . . I care not how close upon your heels are the hounds of accusation and condemnation which bay at you. I tell you that Jesus Christ is here . . . to give you a second chance, and that everything depends upon your attitude of acceptance or rejection of His proffered grace and mercy."

II. A Stirring Revival (3:4-10).

So great was the city that it would have taken Jonah three days to bring his message to the entire population (see v. 3). He had only begun when, at the end of the first day, the city, from the ruler down to the humblest inhabitant, was in deep mourning and repentance for its sin.

Jonah, the man who had been brought back from a living death as a sign (Luke 11:29-32) to Nineveh that God was gracious to repentant sinners, pointed to the fact that though his message was one of condemnation (v. 4), they might expect God to be entreated of them (v. 9). He was (v. 10).

God has sent times of revival when whole cities—and even whole nations—have been turned from their sin. Such revivals have been occurring in recent years in various mission fields. Thousands of earnest Christians are praying now that such a revival may come again in our own land. The writer knows where helpful literature along this line is available without cost. Let us pray and be faithful, and trust God to bring revival to the hearts of men.

III. A Selfish Reaction (4:10, 11).

Jonah, instead of rejoicing in the repentance of Nineveh, showed his narrowness and selfishness by becoming angry (see 4:1). How petty and childish are the attitudes of men when contrasted with the mercy of God.

The Lord, dealing gently with Jonah, gave him a place of refuge and a gourd plant to shade him from the sun (4:5, 6). Then, to teach him a lesson, a worm was permitted to kill the gourd (v. 7). When Jonah was greatly concerned over the loss of the plant, God pointed out to him that it is wrong to be stirred up over the passing of material comfort and not to be concerned for the souls of men.

How many of those who poured out millions of dollars (and rightly so) for the relief of the harassed people of Finland, would give five cents to win them to Christ? Many who will give liberally of money, time and effort to the commendable work of flood or famine relief, will not so much as cross the road to talk to a neighbor about Christ. A farmer will sit up all night to care for a sick cow, but will he spend an hour or two on Sunday or some evening of the week in an effort to win his neighbor's boy (or his own boy) to Christ? These are pertinent and serious questions. What is our answer? God will hold us responsible.

A Prayer

O God, Who hast given to us the knowledge of right and wrong, and hast taught us that it is Thy will that we choose the right throughout our lives, give us grace to be loyal to the right as we see it, and faithful to the highest we know. Amen.

WHY APE HITLER?

This week one of the most momentous political conventions since the days of Abraham Lincoln is being held in the city of brotherly love—Philadelphia.

The Republican Party is going on record as a non-interventionist party and its slogan is "Keep America Out of War." Who ever is nominated as the national standard bearer of the Republican Party must be backed up to the fullest extent by all people who want to keep America what the founding fathers intended it to be.

We owe no allegiance to any foreign power and all the war mongers who are so determined to get the United States into the European war should be handed a gun and told to go first. All those who have a strong pro-British leaning are just as much of a menace to American peace and freedom as are those of pro Nazi leanings and both have no place in America. Had our forefathers been such foreign worshippers as we find many of our people today, America would still be a British colony.

Our American government today is aping Hitler when it advocates compulsory military training for our youth. Here is something America has never had to resort to, why now? If this conscription idea goes into effect it will help to make America a warlike nation instead of a peace loving one. The very things we have been condemning Hitler for, we are now aping.

Our nation is today divided on the war question and will continue so until we have a government in Washington in which the people of the nation can have confidence. Our lack of defense is a crime on the same level with the unpreparedness of France. Instead of wasting billions on senseless projects the past seven years, the administration should have used these vast sums of money to build up our national defenses, army, navy and air force and by so doing the country would not have had to carry a new tax as is now being passed to finance the defense program. Mr. Roosevelt has been doing his utmost to push America into the European slaughterhouse. Army and navy equipment is being sent out of our country leaving us still more than ever defenseless, but this idea is right in line with many other crack pot ideas this administration has advocated and put into practice in the past seven years.

American citizens should just stop and think what it would mean to them if the United States should become involved in the present European war. It would cost every man, woman and child about $50 a year. The average family would have to pay $250 a year or $1,000 in four years. This money would have to be borrowed at about 5% interest so that the average family would be burdened with an additional $50 a year taxes just to pay the interest on the cost of the war. Our industries, banks and the whole country would be forced into bankruptcy. Let us not be fooled by silly propaganda advocating aid to the allies, but instead let us put our money to good use in protecting our own country and homes and not for the destruction of other people.

We must not allow ourselves to be stampeded into a foreign war of politics. Let us not finance this war as we did the last one for which we only got a swift kick in the pants. France and England never paid their war debts nor the interest on these debts. Let us keep our protection at home.

Let us save the Americas for democracy by keeping a European war in Europe.

The WPA reset the shrubs, removed the cinder path which was around the old tree and will fill-in with dirt donated by Mr. Marquardt and hauled by Clarence Bettenhausen. The meeting closed with pledge of allegiance to the Flag. A lovely lunch of fruit salad, cookies and coffee and tea, were served by the hostess. IN MEMORIAM

KINPEL—In fond and loving memory of our dear son and brother, Raymond J. Kinpel, who left us so suddenly thirteen years ago, June 29, 1927.

Memories dear are all we hold,
Of one whose life was like pure gold;

The Frankfort 4-H Happy Hustlers went on a tour thru Joliet recently. Six places of interest were visited. At Dr. Figg's he gave an interesting talk on dentistry and X-ray. At the American Institute of Laundry, we went thru the transcribing rooms, the laundry rooms where clothes are laundered, dried, and ironed and the room where fabrics are tested. From here we went to Nowell's park, ate our lunches and played for two hours. Our next stop was at radio station WCIS where we listened to several broadcasts. We next went thru the entire store of Fitzgerald's Furniture. The last place was the Rainbo Bakery where we saw where they mix the dough, bake the bread, frost the buns, wrap the bread and in the storage room. It was a very interesting tour.

A 'SAFE AND SANE' PARTY
(See Recipes Below)

Why not plan a party for the Fourth of July, to keep the youngsters in the family happy and out of mischief? It might be a party on the porch or in the yard—or a picnic in the country, if you prefer it. Make it a family affair, or invite a youthful guest or two to keep your own children company.

Whatever type of party you plan, make it a festive affair—with gay table decorations (if refreshments are being served at home), very special "Party foods" and patriotic party favors, too. Gaily colored paper table cloths and napkins are a must, and they do save work! And be sure to provide balloons and snap crackers, or noisemakers of another kind.

Plan definite entertainment, with an active game or two to permit the children to use up excess energy, and a "pencil and paper" or guessing game to play when a little rest is in order. Pencil and paper games such as these two might be used—and you'll find that adults as well as young people enjoy them.

Jumbled Names.

Prepare for each player a typed or mimeographed copy of the following list of scrambled letters each of which, when unscrambled, spells the name of a famous American. To get an idea of what the game is like, why not try your own luck with the list before looking at the answers?

Menu for July Fourth Party.

Tomato Aspic Salad
Assorted Sandwiches
Potato Chips
Ice Cream Fire Crackers
Pinwheel Cookies
Beverage

Parfait glasses full of Peppermint Stick ice cream, camouflaged in red paper cylinders to look like giant firecrackers, are amusing for a Fourth of July dessert. Top the ice cream with a cherry, with the stem left on to form the firecracker wick. And serve Pinwheel Cookies to complete the "fireworks dessert."

Chocolate Pinwheels.

½ cup shortening
½ cup granulated sugar
1 egg
2 cups cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 ounce chocolate (melted)
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Cream shortening thoroughly and add sugar slowly. Add egg and beat well. Mix and sift all dry ingredients and add, together with the milk and the vanilla. Divide dough into 2 parts. To one part add the melted chocolate. To the other add the cinnamon. Roll each part one-eighth inch thick. Place the chocolate dough on the cinnamon dough and roll up like a jelly roll. Wrap in wax paper and chill for several hours. Cut in thin slices and bake on a lightly greased cookie sheet in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 8 to 10 minutes.

Potato Chips.

4 medium sized potatoes
2 to 3 pounds fat
Salt

Pare and cut potatoes into very thin slices. Allow sliced potatoes to stand in ice water until firm (about 1 hour). Heat fat to 375 degrees. Blot potatoes dry with a clean towel and place potato slices in French fry basket. Immerse basket in hot fat by handle. Keep potatoes moving constantly so that the slices do not stick together. Remove basket and drain potatoes on brown paper. Sprinkle with salt.

Tomato Aspic.

4 cups canned tomatoes
¾ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1 bay leaf
½ cup celery (chopped)
1 tablespoon onion (chopped)
4 whole cloves
2 tablespoons gelatin
½ cup water
¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Combine the tomatoes, salt, pepper, bay leaf, celery, onion and cloves. Cook gently for 10 minutes and strain. Soak gelatin in cold water and add to the hot tomato mixture, together with Worcestershire sauce, stirring well. Pour into ring mold and chill until set. Unmold on large plate, garnish with lettuce or watercress and fill center with cabbage salad.

Magic Peppermint Stick Ice Cream.

1½ cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
2 cups thin cream or evaporated milk
1 cup cold water
¾ cup crushed peppermint stick candy

Blend sweetened condensed milk, thin cream, and water. Freeze in 2-quart freezer using a mixture of 3 parts ice to 1 part rock salt. Remove dasher. Add crushed peppermint stick candy. Pack in ice and salt for 1 hour or more after freezing. Makes 1½ quarts.

Special Peanut Butter Sandwich Filling.

(Makes 1 cup filling)
1 ripe banana
1 cup peanut butter
¼ cup dates, cut fine
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Mash banana with a fork and thoroughly blend in remaining ingredients.

Ice Cream Cone Clowns.

Place a ball of ice cream on a butter cookie, and with raisins or tiny gumdrops make eyes, nose and mouth in the ice cream. Place a cone jauntily on top of the ice cream. Add a ruff of whipped cream around the clown's neck.

Brown Bread Sandwiches.

1 loaf brown bread
1 3-ounce package cream cheese
2 tablespoons butter
Slice brown bread very thin. Mix cream cheese and butter together thoroughly. Spread brown bread slices generously with the cheese mixture.

Sick Child May Be Problem to Parents, Doctor

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

JUST as a child learns to have confidence in and a liking for his physician, so also can he have fear and distrust. Certain thoughts or feelings are associated with the visit or sight of the physician and patience and kindness will open the way to the child's trust and confidence.

Dr. Stewart R. Smith, Indianapolis, in the Journal of the Indiana State Medical Association says:

"The general practitioner of medicine can be one of the most profound influences on the emotional life of the children whom he meets. The doctor should know that this influence can accomplish a great deal in helping a sick child to a healthy acceptance of his illness, but if this influence is misdirected it may be a big factor in causing the youngster to be an invalid for life."

Dr. Barton

Doctor Must Know Parents.

To gain full knowledge of why a youngster behaves as he does, the physician must know the child's surroundings, including the type of parents he has. "Arguing with these children is useless, shaming is cruel, and coddling is fatal."

"In dealing with these children, the practitioner might well have unending patience, have faith in the child's ability, try to see the problem as the child sees it, and believe that in every sort of conduct disorder the child is trying to solve some problem."

I believe that parents and teachers before referring a youngster to a physician because of some "odd" behavior could save the time and patience of the physician by asking themselves "Why does he behave this way?" The answer, as Dr. Smith points out, is that the youngster is trying to solve a problem. By patient questioning, parent or teacher or both might learn what is the problem and help the youngster to solve the problem for himself.

Immunization Is Boon to Children

A PHYSICIAN friend of mine once confided the following to me:

"I wish we had lived in a poor and more thickly populated section of the city when my youngsters were small; they would have had all the childhood diseases—measles, scarlet fever, chickenpox, whooping cough—and have become immune to (free from) virtually all ailments, now they are grown."

I do not think many parents would choose this method of "strengthening" their children because the complications from these childhood ailments might have resulted in partial deafness, heart disease and even death.

There is, however, a way of protecting children from many of these diseases. It is called the "immunization" of the children.

In an article by Prof. C. S. Raue, M. D., Philadelphia, writing as guest editor of the Medical World, it is said:

Earliest Immunization.

"The earliest immunization procedure is vaccination against smallpox. The best time to vaccinate an infant is between the third and the sixth month. At this age complications are less likely to occur and there is little or no danger of brain inflammation following vaccination."

After the infant is six months old, there should be immunization against whooping cough; it is claimed that 80 per cent of children receiving Sauer whooping cough vaccine will, two to three months after vaccination, be immune for several years.

Nine months is the age to immunize against diphtheria. The horror of diphtheria is almost unknown to young parents today.

The advisability of immunizing against scarlet fever is not fully endorsed by the medical profession; it is left to the physician's judgment in each case.

"There is no vaccine for obtaining permanent immunity against measles, but a child exposed to measles may be protected by an injection of placental globulin."

At That, We Doubt Ready Answer Saved the Day

A certain gentleman was very fond of golf, and of a little refreshment after the game. He arrived home very late one night, and was met by his wife in the hall.

"Well, and what excuse have you got to offer for coming home at this unearthly hour?" she asked angrily.

"It was like this, my dear, I was playing golf with some friends and—"

"Playing golf!" she cried in disgust. "Are you trying to tell me you can play golf in the dark?"

"Oh, yes, my dear," he said quickly. "You see, we were using the night clubs."

These Things Endure

IF WE work upon marble it will perish. If we work upon brass time will efface it. If we rear temples they will crumble to dust. But if we work upon men's immortal minds, if we imbue them with high principles, with the just fear of God and love of their fellow-men, we engrave on those tablets something which no time can efface, and which will brighten and brighten to all eternity.—Daniel Webster, "Speech in Faneuil Hall," 1852.

If I could not be an Are!
For a Could Be is a May Be.
With a chance of touching par;

Quality Paint

Paint quality becomes evident only after paint is applied and subjected to a long period of exposure.

PRATT & LAMBERT HOUSE PAINT

is more economical than cheap paint because it spreads farther, looks better and lasts longer. Cheap paint is costly at any price. Good paint is an investment!

"P & L" may cost more per gallon but is less per job.
